Feel you're a world away from your kid when it comes to talking to them? Communication begins with you. Have you thought, "That's great, but I don't even know where to begin?" Or maybe you feel that you have tried your best and still you don't seem to be connecting with your offspring? Let's go back to the basics and discover how each of the four personality groups communicate. And, they all communicate differently of course!

Is your kid an introvert or an extravert? What's it matter? Join us to discover that while both face challenges, they also have strengths that you can tap into for better relations.

This evening will be filled with conversation about how to enjoy communicating with your family members even better than you are right now. Please join us as we discover the joy of creating happy, confident kids by learning about their innate communication strengths.
